Woodland Management: What is Right for You and Your Woodland?

Managing your woodlands to grow healthy forests and produce revenue depends on making the right choices for your location. This session will help woodland owners to understand how stand dynamics and market considerations are used in the application of management.

Feb. 13

Understanding the Financial Aspects of Woodland Management

Financial decisions that you make today will have ramifications for your timber property for years to come. This session provides an overview of financial factors that affect your woodland management such as when to re-plant, when to thin, when to harvest, when to use cost-share programs and more.

Feb. 20

More than Timber: Income Opportunities from Non-timber Forest Products

While selling timber from your woodlands may be a great revenue source, it is not the only option for income. Learn more about the range of possibilities to generate income from your woodlands that depend on your location, forest type and more, that are compatible with timber management too.

Feb. 27

Your Woodland Legacy: Intact, In Forest, and In Family Ownership

The love of your land, your management ethic, your desire to see your property remain intact, in forest, and in family ownership – these are components of your woodland legacy. This session is designed to help you find the best way to pass this legacy intact to your heirs.

Learn more about how you can take better care of your woodlands in this exciting course! This is the second series of a multi-part course.
